Rules of Play

All ABL games will be played under the rules and guidelines mandated in the 1996-97 NCAA Basketball Rule Book, with detailed provisions for women's play, with the following exceptions:

- The official ball used for play will be a "standard" sized ball (not the women's NCAA ball)
- Official playing time will consist of four (4) ten (10) minute periods
- Overtime periods will consist of five (5) minutes
- Player disqualification will occur on the sixth (6) personal foul
- A twenty-five (25) second shot clock will be used

Other Specifications:

- Quarter breaks = 130 seconds
- Halftime = 15 minutes

Each team receives three (3) "full" 100-second time outs and one (1) 20-second time out per half. Unused time outs do not carry over from the first half to the second half. Each team receives one additional time out in overtime, and can carry over unused time outs from the second half into overtime. During televised games, there will be an additional TV time out at the 5-minute mark in each quarter.

- Full Time Outs (non-televised games) = 100 seconds
- Full Time Outs (televised games) = 120 seconds

The Glory

Debbie Miller-Palmore
Atlanta Glory General Manager

When the American Basketball League (ABL) started looking for a general manager for the Atlanta Glory, Debbie Miller-Palmore quickly emerged as the logical choice. Miller-Palmore has spent her career on and around the basketball court as a player, coach and administrator, while her considerable presence in Atlanta as a teacher, motivational speaker and radio personality has paved the way for the Glory's success.

Debbie Miller-Palmore's storied playing career was highlighted by her selection to the 1980 USA Olympic Team. The Bronx native starred as a collegian at Boston University, where she was named an All-American. In her Hall of Fame career at BU, Miller-Palmore set school records for points, rebounds, assists and steals that still stand today. Her accomplishments at Boston University were so stunning that despite playing out of the spotlight of the nation's more highly regarded conferences, she earned an invitation to the 1980 Olympic Trials, where she played her way onto the USA Team.

Like most of the nation's top players from her era, Miller-Palmore's only options for a professional playing career lay overseas, so after graduating cum laude in 1981 with a degree in education, Miller-Palmore enjoyed her time in Europe and South America as a star player while teaching a variety of subjects in local schools and coaching several different sports.

In 1988, Miller-Palmore moved to Atlanta to continue her career in teaching and coaching, but she also found new ways to inspire and instruct the next generation of women, adding other titles to her name: motivational speaker, talk-show host, administrator, business woman, wife and mother.

In 1995, she met with ABL co-founder Bobby Johnson about founding a new women's basketball league, and Miller-Palmore has played a central role in the development of the ABL ever since. Miller-Palmore coordinated the league's inaugural tryout camp at Emory University in Atlanta, in which more than 570 athletes and 100 referees pursued their dreams of making history. Miller-Palmore managed to balance that role with her latest and grandest title, General Manager of the Atlanta Glory.

When Miller-Palmore is not preparing for the Glory's inaugural season, she is giving her time to one of the many organizations to which she belongs. Along with Evander Holyfield, Edwin Moses and Lee Haney, Miller-Palmore serves as a Commissioner of the Inner City Games, the Olympic-styled competition spearheaded by Arnold Schwarzenegger. In 1992 Miller-Palmore founded the Top of the Key Foundation, a non-profit organization aimed at providing basketball instruction to young athletes and instilling in them the benefits of sports and sportsmanlike conduct as both young women and citizens. Miller-Palmore is also a member of the Georgia Olympians, the Women's Basketball Coaches Association, the Women's Sports Foundation, Sportsnet and Georgia Women's Intersport Network.

Debbie and her husband Kevin have a 5-year old daughter, Kaci, and a 2-year old son, Keenan and reside in Stone Mountain.

"I think the ABL and the Glory have established a strong identity in Atlanta with Teresa and Saudia. They are well known locally, throughout the state and throughout the entire region."

"I'm excited about the Atlanta Glory for several reasons. First of all, it's great that Teresa and Saudia will be able to stay close to home and play. That's something they obviously want to do. I'm also excited for the University of Georgia and Georgia people because we will have the opportunity to watch three of our greatest players."

--University of Georgia Head Coach Andy Landers

Patricia "Trish" Roberts
Head Coach

Atlanta Glory head coach Patricia (Trish) Roberts takes the helm with a reputation as one of the most respected coaches in women's basketball and one of the greatest players of all time. Roberts brings with her a wealth of experience, having coached and played on the collegiate, national and professional levels. She also brings a fondness for an exciting, up-tempo style of play that will make the Glory fun to watch.

The Monroe, Ga., native provides the starting point in the Glory's Olympic lineage. Roberts, then a 6-foot-2 center, was the third-leading scorer and rebounder on the 1976 USA Olympic Team that won the silver medal in the first women's basketball competition in Olympic history.

Roberts followed her Olympic experience by playing her senior season at the University of Tennessee, where in one season she established herself as one of the most dominating players ever to wear a Lady Vol uniform. Nineteen seasons after she graduated from Tennessee, Roberts still owns five season records and three single-game marks. She scored more points (987), grabbed more rebounds (467), made more field goals (428) and averaged more points (29.9) and rebounds (14.2) than any Lady Vol in any season. On November 13, 1976, Roberts set an SEC record that still stands when she scored 51 (on 24 field goals) against the University of Kentucky. She also set the Tennessee single-game mark with 24 rebounds against Anderson (S.C.) College. Roberts still holds 21 of Tennessee's top 33 scoring games (each more than 30 points) as well as 16 of the school's top 33 rebounding nights (each in excess of 15 boards). She was the first Lady Vol to be named a Kodak All-American, and was also named a Street & Smith's All-American.

After ending her stellar college career, Roberts moved on to the professional ranks. In 1978, Roberts was the captain of the U.S. national team, then joined the Minnesota Fillies of the Women's Basketball League (WBL) as a player/coach. In 1980-81, Roberts capped her final year as a player by making the WBL All-Pro team as a member of the St. Louis Streak.

Success on the court does not always guarantee success as a coach, but Roberts has proven herself as one of the game's best coaches. What began as a stint as player/coach in the WBL became a new challenge and full-time profession, as Roberts moved up the coaching ranks as an assistant with such schools as Central Michigan University (1982-84), the University of Illinois (1984-85), the University of Wisconsin (1985-86) and the University of North Carolina - Chapel Hill (1986-88).

Roberts began her career as a head coach at the University of Maine, where her commitment to up-tempo offense and aggressive defense put the Black Bears' program on the NCAA Division I map. Roberts compiled a record of 82-32 over four years, including one Seaboard Conference regular season championship, two North Atlantic Conference championships and a berth in the Women's National Invitational Tournament. Roberts blended academic and athletic success: Roberts' teams had the highest grade-point average of all the University's men's and women's athletics programs.

Having established herself as one of the up-and-coming coaches in NCAA Division I, Roberts headed west for a new challenge: the Big Ten. In 1992, Roberts became the fifth head coach in the University of Michigan women's basketball history, where injuries limited her team's ability to compete in the Big Ten. Even so, Roberts was able to develop two All-Big Ten players, three SportsChannel Chicago All-Freshmen honorees (including the 1994-95 Freshman of the Year), and four Academic All-Big Ten players.

Roberts is active in promoting the game of women's basketball through such organizations as the Women's Basketball Coaches Association, the Black Coaches Association, and the USA Basketball Programs Committee.

Amy Cherubini
Assistant Coach

Assistant Coach Amy Cherubini comes to the Atlanta Glory with a familiarity with Head Coach Trish Roberts' system. Cherubini spent the 1995-96 season as Coach Roberts' assistant at the University of Michigan. Before joining Coach Roberts' staff, Cherubini coached at the high school level.

The Columbus, Ohio, native enjoyed a successful playing career in the Big Ten before turning to coaching. The former guard was Indiana University's leading scorer and team MVP and was named the Chicago Tribune's 1992 Big Ten Player of the Year. Cherubini owns the Big Ten record for three-pointers in a game (10). The mark was an NCAA record...until it was broken by Glory guard Cornelia Gayden, who hit 12 in a game in 1995.

"Cornelia and I joked about it," said Cherubini. "She was 12 for 15, and I was 10 for 14, so we were both in the zone. I still have the Big Ten record, and I set it in my hometown against Ohio State in front of my parents."

Cheryl Appleberry
Athletic Trainer

Athletic Trainer Cheryl Appleberry leaves Agnes Scott College for the Glory, after taking Agnes Scott's training program from its infancy. In her six years at the women's school, Appleberry set up the NCAA Division III program's training procedures and facilities as head athletic trainer, acting athletic director and assistant athletic director.

Appleberry, who hails from Rogers, Ark., earned her bachelors degree from Southwest Missouri State University in health and physical education and athletic injury management, then finished her masters in sports medicine and sports biomechanics from Georgia State. The former NCAA Division I softball player is involved in the Southeast Athletic Trainers Association.

Deborah L. Riley
Director of Marketing & Sponsorships

Deborah L. Riley heads the Glory's marketing department after a successful run as USA Track & Field's ticketing and marketing manager. Through her efforts, the 1996 USA Track & Field Olympic Trials set records for attendance and ticket sales. Previously, the Florida State University graduate from Savannah, Ga., had served as the Assistant to the Executive Director of the Atlanta Super Bowl XXVIII Host Committee and as a sales executive for the Georgia Dome.

John W. Jimmerson
Director of Ticket Sales & Merchandising

John W. Jimmerson joins the Glory after establishing himself as one of Atlanta's top sales managers. Before joining the Glory, Jimmerson was a Club Director of Sales and Marketing for SportsLife. He has also worked in sales and marketing with Miller Brewing and was a sales manager with Coca-Cola. John played for Marquette University for two years before transferring to the University of South Alabama where he received a degree in public relations and communications. The Grand Rapids, Michigan native lives with his wife Annie and son John Jr.

Kelly Brown
Director of Game Operations & Special Events

Kelly Brown gives the Atlanta Glory yet another link to the 1996 Olympic Games. Brown served as the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games' (ACOG) Venue Technology Manager for Stone Mountain and Georgia State University competition venues. The Virginia Commonwealth University alumna earned her masters degree in sports administration from Georgia State on an NCAA Postgraduate Fellowship after serving as the assistant coach for Villanova University's field hockey team. Brown and her husband, Gene McIntyre, reside in north Atlanta with their bird and three cats.

Jeff Johnson
Director of Public & Media Relations

Jeff Johnson joins the Atlanta Glory as director of public and relations after coordinating the ABL's media relations during the league's inaugural tryout camp in May 1996. Johnson also has worked in sports information, media relations and marketing for Emory University and with the Southern League. The Wake Forest University graduate left doctoral studies in Christian Ethics at Emory to pursue a career in sports administration. He and his wife, April, live in Decatur, Ga.

Sheila A. Allen
Office Manager

Sheila A. Allen has landed her "dream job" as the Atlanta Glory office manager. Allen, who was an accountant at Georgia State University for four years, organized Georgia State's basketball fan club, the "Courtside Crazies". She received her bachelor's degree in athletic administration from St. John's University, and is pursuing a degree in human resources at Georgia State. She and her husband, Gary live in Decatur.

Vickie D. Mitchell
Community Relations & Special Events

Vickie D. Mitchell brings experience in Olympic and professional basketball to the Atlanta Glory, having worked in community relations and special events with the Orlando Magic and Atlanta Hawks. The University of Georgia graduate most recently worked with ACOG as the assistant producer for the 1996 Atlanta Olympic Basketball competition, then as the producer for the 1996 Paralympic basketball competition. She is pursuing her masters degree in sports administration from Georgia State University with a concentration in sports marketing.

#4 Teresa Edwards
5-11 Guard/Forward
Cairo, Ga.
University of Georgia (1986)
Born: July 19, 1964

Teresa Edwards may be the most decorated player in USA women's basketball history. She is the first USA basketball player, male or female, to play on four Olympic teams. The youngest member of the 1984 squad emerged as the leader of the '96 team, starting at both guard positions during the USA National Team 1995-96 tour.

As a collegian, Edwards helped establish the University of Georgia as a perennial contender in women's basketball. In her career as a Lady Bulldog, number 4 brought three SEC titles back to Athens and led the squad to two Final Four appearances, including the 1985 national title game. "T" was twice honored as an All-American while being named to the All-SEC first team three times. She is Georgia's all-time leader in assists and steals and third-best scorer and is one of only three players in Georgia history to have her number retired.

Edwards has represented the United States on so many different national teams, it's a wonder that "USA" isn't permanently tattooed on her chest. Edwards has played on USA teams in international competition in 11 different tournaments over 13 years, not including the 1995-96 USA National Team's 51-game exhibition tour. Through the years, she has been remarkably consistent, averaging 12 or more points per game in 11 of the 13 tournaments while leading eight of the 11 teams to first-place finishes (the other three teams finished in the top three). The 5-foot-9 guard has been named USA Basketball's Female Athlete of the Year twice, in 1987 and 1990.

At no time did Edwards shine as brightly as during the 1996 Olympic Games played in her home state of Georgia. She began the Atlanta Games in the spotlight, as she celebrated her birthday by offering the Athlete's Oath during the Games Opening Ceremonies.

Once the action turned to the basketball court, Edwards continued to play a starring role. Although Edwards had made the USA National Team as a shooting guard, an injury to point guard Dawn Staley during the team's exhibition tour forced Edwards to shift to the play-making spot. Edwards relished the role, adapting so well that when Staley recovered, Head Coach Tara Vanderveer decided to use her off the bench and leave "T" at the point.

Edwards gladly reduced her scoring role in exchange for the opportunity to lead the squad to victory. Even though her scoring averaged dropped to 6.9 points a game, she led the tournament in assists, averaging an eye-popping eight per game, highest in USA Olympic history, including an Olympic-record 15 assists in a victory over Australia.

The Inside Scoop: Interested in taking a position in the ABL's front office after her playing career....Took time out of her professional career to return to school and finish her degree in Leisure Studies in 1989....Has a street named after her in her hometown, Cairo, Ga., which is also the birthplace of another athletic pioneer, Jackie Robinson.

Atlanta Glory Head Coach Trish Roberts on Teresa Edwards: "Teresa is going to give experience and direction to this team. She can play either guard spot or small forward. In my opinion, Teresa is one of the greatest players of all time."

#40 Carla McGhee
6-3 Center/Forward
Peoria, Ill./Stone Mountain, Ga.
Tennessee University (1990)
Born: March 6, 1968

Carla McGhee provides the Atlanta Glory with an inside scoring threat to match the perimeter talents of Teresa Edwards, Saudia Roundtree and Niesa Johnson. McGhee also has one of the most inspirational stories among the Glory's players. The 6-foot-3 post player has become one of the game's top inside players, but nine years ago she was told that she would never play basketball again.

McGhee was named to the 1987 Tennessean All-Freshman team after playing in 34 games on the University of Tennessee's NCAA national championship team. She had laid the groundwork for what should have been a break-out 1987-88 season. Everything was going her way.

That all changed in an instant when McGhee was involved in an auto accident that left her in a coma. All but two bones in her face were broken, as was her hip and her jaw. She came out of the coma, but faced months of painful rehabilitation simply to be able to walk. Basketball, she was told, was no longer an option.

Carla McGhee didn't listen to what she was told. She took a year away from basketball and school in order to recover from her injuries, and during that time she rededicated herself to the sport she loved and to making the most of life. That renewed attitude led her back to the top of women's basketball: as a sophomore she started on Tennessee's 1988-89 team, which went 35-2 and won McGhee's second NCAA title.

McGhee left Tennessee after the 1989-90 season with a degree in sports management with honors and embarked upon a professional career in Germany, Italy, Spain and France. Despite her success overseas, it was an easy decision for McGhee to stay home and play on the 1995-96 USA National Team in hopes of fulfilling her dream to play in the 1996 Atlanta Olympics. The Stone Mountain, Ga., resident averaged 5.8 points and 4.1 rebounds per game on the National team's 51-game exhibition tour before averaging 3.1 points for the gold medal Olympic team.

McGhee's Olympic experience is the high point of a nine-year career representing the USA in international competition which began in 1987 as a member of the Jones Cup team. In 1994, McGhee pulled double duty for the USA, playing in the World Championships in Sydney, Australia, with seven other members of the 1996 Olympic team (including the Glory's Teresa Edwards), then playing in the Goodwill Games in St. Petersburg, Russia, with five 1996 Olympians and Glory teammate Lauretta Freeman. McGhee was also a member of the 1995 Pan Am team whose chance for glory was denied when the 1995 Pan American Games' women's basketball tournament was canceled because only four teams had registered for the tournament. That USA squad featured 11 players who will play in the ABL this season: Edna Campbell, Sylvia Crawley and Melody Howard of Colorado, Karen Deden of New England, Richmond's Dena Evans, Molly Goodenbour and Dawn Staley, Tari Phillips of Seattle, Katy Steding of Portland, San Jose's Val Whiting and McGhee.

The Inside Scoop: McGhee is the adopted daughter of Dennis and Claire Davis....Would like to start a foundation to fund children's causes and would also like to "dabble in the sports agency business" when she is through playing....Nicknamed "C," giving rise to a possible "TLC" frontcourt when Carla is joined by Teresa "T" Edwards and Lauretta Freeman....Includes bowling among her hobbies....Favorite NBA player: boyfriend (and former University of Georgia star) Willie Anderson....Favorite non-basketball athletes are track stars Michael Johnson and Richmond Rage guard/Olympic heptathlete Jackie Joyner-Kersee....Says she is proudest of the fact that "I have overcome all the obstacles and odds. I have a great degree, two NCAA national championships, and an Olympic gold medal!"

Atlanta Glory Head Coach Trish Roberts on Carla McGhee: "I'm very happy to have her on the team. Carla provides experience and maturity and adds the strength inside that we need. She's played at the game's highest level, and she comes from a winning program, so she knows how to win."

#10 Saudia Roundtree
5-7 Point Guard
Anderson, S.C.
Georgia/Kilgore JC (1996)
Born: October 4, 1974

Saudia Roundtree is one of the most exciting playmakers to come out of college in many years. The 1996 Naismith Award winner as the nation's best college women's basketball player, Roundtree led her Georgia team to the NCAA championship game in her senior season. Her catalog of honors includes 1996 SEC female athlete of the year and Kodak All-American. The 5-foot-7 guard was named the National Junior College Player of the Year in 1994 after averaging 26.2 points per game for Kilgore (Texas) Junior College.

Roundtree runs the floor with boundless energy, displaying exceptional speed and ball-handling skills. Her talents have not escaped the notice of men's basketball as well: this spring she was drafted by the United States Basketball League (USBL), a men's summer league that has served as a proving ground for NBA players. Roundtree declined, instead focusing on her debut with the Glory.

The Inside Scoop: Close friends with Glory teammate Niesa Johnson (they roomed together during tryouts for the 1996 US Olympic team)....Says Johnson of Roundtree, "If we were the Chicago Bulls, Saudia would be our Dennis Rodman."

Atlanta Glory Head Coach Trish Roberts on Saudia Roundtree: "Saudia is one of the most intense players I've ever seen. She's young, but she has the aggressiveness that every coach looks for in a point guard."

#20 Niesa Johnson
5-9 Guard
Clinton, Miss.
University of Alabama (1995)
Born: February, 7 1973

Niesa Johnson enjoyed one of the most glorious careers in SEC history. A two-time Kodak All-American and three-time all-SEC first-teamer, Johnson established herself as one of the best players in school history. The 5-foot-9 guard holds Alabama records for scoring, assists and steals, and ranks second all-time in three-pointers among Tide men and women.

Johnson sustained a level of excellence throughout her collegiate career: after winning honors as the National Freshman of the Year, she earned national recognition as a two-time Naismith Award finalist. Her dual ability to score and create for her teammates led to her selection to USA Basketball Women's Junior National and Select Teams after each of her first three seasons, and this summer she represented USA Basketball in the Jones Cup Tournament. Her success on the court is paralleled by her achievements off it - she was named to the all-SEC academic team in 1993-94.

The Inside Scoop: Majored in orthopedic handicaps at Alabama....Wants to work with physically challenged children after her playing career....Invited to the Olympic Trials for the 1996 USA team....Johnson is a cousin of former Pittsburgh Steeler running back Franco Harris....Washes her hands at halftime of each game.

Atlanta Glory Head Coach Trish Roberts on Niesa Johnson: "Niesa is a great three-point shooter and a real crowd-pleaser. She can play either guard spot, and she augments her shooting with good defense. Niesa fits the mold of the typical Glory player - she likes a fast-paced style of play, and she's fun to watch."

#24 Cornelia Gayden
5-9 Guard
Bogue Chitto, Miss.
Louisiana State University (1995)
Born: May 11, 1971

Cornelia Gayden knows how to light up a scoreboard. Perhaps the greatest three-point shooter in NCAA history, Gayden is the NCAA's all-time leader in three-point field goals and attempts. The guard led the SEC in scoring three consecutive years, garnering 1st-team all-SEC honors each year.

Gayden's signature performance came against Jackson State (Miss.), when she scored 49 points, including 12 three-pointers. That outburst broke eight NCAA, SEC and LSU records, including the NCAA mark for most treys in a game. What made the night more memorable for Gayden was that it sealed LSU Head Coach Sue Gunter's 500th victory.

Gayden left LSU as the program's third-leading scorer and the SEC's eighth most prolific scorer. She's not just one-dimensional, however - she also owns the LSU mark for most steals in a game (10). In 1995, she represented the USA in the World University Games in Japan on a squad that included fellow ABLers Sylvia Crawley, Charlotte Smith and Melody Howard of Colorado, Katie Smith of Columbus, and Portland's Michelle Marciniak.

The Inside Scoop: Nicknamed "Neals"....Hobbies include roller skating....Shares a common passion with NBA players Steve Smith and Joe Dumars - lists "Sanford & Son" as her favorite TV show.

Atlanta Glory Head Coach Trish Roberts on Cornelia Gayden:
"Cornelia led the SEC in scoring for three straight years. She's a great three-point shooter. Gayden gives us exactly what we need on the perimeter."

#32 Stacey Lovelace
6-4 Forward
Detroit, Mich.
Purdue University (1996)
Born: December 5, 1974

Stacey Lovelace comes to the Glory after leaving a legacy as one of the greatest post players in Purdue history. Lovelace holds school records for rebounds, blocked shots (3rd in Big Ten history), and double-doubles (27), and is second in school history in rebounds per game and games played. The 6-foot-4 post player also ranks in Purdue's top five in steals, points, and scoring average.

Lovelace earned honors as a Kodak All-American, Big Ten Player of the Year and Big Ten MVP as a junior. She also has played on several national teams, including the WBCA College All-Star team that faced off against the women's Dream Team earlier this year. In 1995, the 6-foot-4 forward played on the Jones Cup squad that took the bronze. Lovelace earned all-tournament honors for her efforts, as she led the team with 14.9 points and 7.1 rebounds per game. One of her teammates on that trip to Taipei, Taiwan was Glory point guard Saudia Roundtree.

The Inside Story: Graduated this summer from Purdue with a degree in organizational leadership and supervision....Plans on law school after her playing career ends....Proud of "remaining ladylike on and off the court and making my family proud."....Favorite TV show: "Living Single."

Atlanta Glory Head Coach Trish Roberts on Stacey Lovelace: "What I like about Stacey is that she is a finesse post player who can really get up and down the floor. Players like Stacey will allow the Glory to play the up-tempo game successfully."

#33 Lauretta Freeman
6-1 Forward
Mobile, Ala.
Auburn University (1993)
Born: March 17, 1971

Lauretta Freeman blossomed during her senior year. The forward improved each year at Auburn, bettering her rebounds per game by at least 2.7 each season while upping her scoring output by 3, 4.4 and 7.7 points in each of her last three years. That improvement brought her national notoriety as a senior, when she was honored as the SEC Player of the Year and was named a Kodak All-American. Her 13.8 rebounds per game led the SEC, while her 18.7 points per game were second in the SEC...to Glory teammate Cornelia Gayden.

Freeman has a knack for turning obstacles into strengths. She was forced to give up basketball after becoming pregnant during high school. Rather than letting motherhood end her dreams of playing collegiate ball, Freeman turned to her daughter, Jamie, as her motivation for success. Lauretta returned to basketball, landed a scholarship to Auburn, and developed into a top player while becoming the first Lady Tiger basketball player to earn her degree in four years, leaving with a bachelor's degree in business administration. She and Jamie then traveled overseas so Lauretta could play professionally in Spain for two seasons before returning to Auburn so Lauretta could pursue a master's degree in education.

The Inside Scoop: Member of 1994 USA Goodwill Games team which took gold in St. Petersburg, Russia.... Plans to become a tenured educator in a public school system when her playing career is over.

Atlanta Glory Head Coach Trish Roberts on Lauretta Freeman:
"Lauretta is a finesse player who can play either forward spot. She plays well in the post, but she can also step out on the perimeter as a threat."

#34 Margo Graham
6-4 Center
Sugar Land, Texas
Houston/Ranger JC/Texas Tech (1993)
Born: December 18, 1970

Margo Graham provides the Atlanta Glory with the kind of physical play that's needed to complement their up-tempo players. Graham showed her ability inside at Houston, where she earned all-Southwest Conference second team honors her senior year after leading the SWC in blocks and rebounding. After pro stints in Turkey, Israel, Finland and the Dominican Republic, Graham wowed the scouts at the ABL pre-draft tryout camp with her strength inside.

Graham's basketball career almost ended before it began. After languishing on the bench during her freshman year with Texas Tech, Graham was fed up with big-time basketball and transferred to Ranger (Texas) Junior College, where she was a JUCO All-American softball player as well as an All-Region basketball player. Fortunately, the University of Houston coaching staff urged her to give basketball another try. The 6-foot-4 center became the spark for the Lady Cougars and laying the groundwork for her success as a professional. She was named the team's co-MVP in 1993 after leading the team in scoring, rebounding and blocks.

The Inside Scoop: Nicknamed "Go"...Both parents are educators in the Houston area....Has to have her toenails painted green before each game....Favorite non-basketball athlete is Seattle Seahawk running back Lamar Smith, who also happens to be her boyfriend.

Atlanta Glory Head Coach Trish Roberts on Margo Graham: "Margo gives us the strength we need inside. She's a banger who mixes it up well - a good role player."

#35 Missy Masley
6-2 Forward
Farmington, N.Y.
Penn State University (1995)
Born: October 10, 1972

Missy Masley excelled in several roles during her collegiate career. As a sophomore, the 6-foot-2 post player came off the bench to give Penn State almost 10 points a game. By her senior year she was averaging more than 15 points and almost nine rebounds a game. Not only was Masley an AP All-American honorable mention her senior year, she also was named to the Big Ten All-Academic team three times and was the Penn State homecoming queen.

Masley's wasted no time in establishing herself as a professional basketball player. In 1995-96, she played in Switzerland's professional league and lead the league in scoring, averaging 32 points per game. She also notched 11.2 rebounds per contest. Masley has a reputation as a hard worker, and her work ethic and intelligence are assets she has used to become a successful player.

The Inside Scoop: Graduated with a bachelor's of science degree in biology....Masley has applied to medical schools with the understanding that when she is accepted, her enrollment will be deferred until she finishes her basketball career....The team's only married player wed John Steck this summer

Atlanta Glory Head Coach Trish Roberts on Missy Masley: "Missy is a versatile player - she can play inside or step out and shoot the jumper, and she runs the floor very well. She's always played in a winning program, and it helps. I'm just glad I don't have to coach against her anymore!"

#50 Rachel Hemmer
6-3 Center
Austin, Texas
Stanford University (1995)
Born: April 2, 1973

Rachel Hemmer began her collegiate career with a bang as a member of Stanford's 1992 NCAA Championship team. Though only a freshman, Hemmer was named to the 1992 Final Four all-tournament team as well as the NCAA West Regional all-tourney squad. She also was named the Pac-10 freshman of the year. The Texan blossomed as a junior, when she was named first team All Pac-10 and honorable mention Kodak All-American.

What would have been a glorious senior season at Stanford was diminished when Hemmer fractured her ankle. She worked hard to recover from the injury and averaged 6.9 points and 5.0 rebounds a game as a senior, including a 13 point, eight rebound performance against Purdue (and Glory teammate Stacey Lovelace) to help lead Stanford into the 1995 NCAA Final Four. Hemmer finished her career as the Cardinal's fifth leading rebounder and 15th leading scorer all-time.

The Inside Scoop: Graduated from Stanford in 1995 with a degree in communications....wants to get into broadcasting after her playing career ends.... In 1993, Hemmer played on the USA Junior National Team with current Glory teammate Niesa Johnson....Joins Carla McGhee as the only members of the Glory with NCAA National Championship rings.

Atlanta Glory Head Coach Trish Roberts on Rachel Hemmer: "Rachel has good size, and she's very physical. Having played on a national title team at Stanford, Rachel brings us some winning experience."

Introducing

A League of Their Own

The American Basketball League (ABL) has been created to establish the world's premier women's basketball league and give America's best players the opportunity to play professionally in their own country.

The ABL was developed with the support and involvement of America's top players. Nine members of the USA National Team - the "Founding Players" of the ABL - announced the formation of the league at a press conference in September of 1995. Those players have been instrumental in every aspect of the ABL's development.

Their new league will showcase the greatest players in the world, give female athletes an opportunity to pursue their dreams, and provide exciting and affordable family entertainment for basketball fans throughout this country.

The Time is Right

Women's basketball is booming. Basketball is now the No. 1 youth participation sport in the country for girls. Women's college basketball attendance has tripled in the last 12 years. In fact, the '96 NCAA women's championship game outdrew the men's final and had the highest TV rating in history for a women's game. Corporate America also has discovered women's basketball, signing major sponsorship deals and featuring star players in national advertising campaigns.

The quality of the game has increased to the point that coaching legend John Wooden recently said, "To me, the best pure basketball I see today is among the better women's teams."

Prior to the ABL, no professional league existed in the United States to showcase this great talent, capitalize on this growing interest, and meet this public demand for the highest level of women's basketball.

The Inaugural Season

The ABL will begin play on October 18, 1996, just a few months after the conclusion of the 1996 Olympic Games in Atlanta. Each team will play a 40-game schedule. The regular season will run from October through February, ending with the championship playoffs in late February and early March. The league will consist of eight teams, all located in carefully chosen markets that have supported women's basketball.

Eastern Conference	Western Conference
Atlanta Glory	Colorado Xplosion
Columbus Quest	Portland Power
Richmond Rage	San Jose Lasers
New England Blizzard	Seattle Reign

Pursuing the Dream

In May, over 570 players attended the inaugural ABL tryouts at Emory University in Atlanta. A pool of 122 was selected for the ABL draft, joined by 10 members of the USA National Team and other previously signed top players. The ABL draft was held June 19 in San Jose, with each team choosing 10 players and three alternates.

The World's Best Players

The ABL will feature the premier players in the world. Most of the members of the United States Olympic team - Jennifer Azzi, Teresa Edwards, Venus Lacy,

The ABL

Nikki McCray, Carla McGhee, Dawn Staley and Katy Steding - will play in the ABL, along with three-time Olympic track and field gold medalist Jackie Joyner-Kersee, a former basketball star at UCLA.

ABL Founding Player
Jennifer Azzi

The top college seniors from the class of 1996, including College player of the Year Saudia Roundtree of Georgia, Tennessee's Final Four MVP Michelle Marciniak, and All-Americans Jennifer Rizzotti of Connecticut, Tanya Kostic of Oregon State and Sheri Sam of Vanderbilt, will play in the ABL.

Dozens of other great players who previously had to put their careers on hold or go overseas to play, like 1996 Olympic alternates Edna Campbell and Sylvia Crawley, '94 Final Four MVP Charlotte Smith of North Carolina, '92 Final Four MVP Molly Goodenbour of Stanford, Colorado All-American Shelley Sheetz, Tennessee All-American Lisa Harrison, Alabama All-American Niesa Johnson, and many, many others, will play in the ABL.

Top Coaches and GMs

The ABL has attracted high quality coaches: outstanding basketball people like Atlanta coach Trish Roberts, a member of the 1976 USA Olympic Team, All-American at Tennessee, and former head coach at Michigan and Maine; four of the finest small college coaches in the country - Portland's Greg Bruce, who took Portland State to the NCAAs five straight times, Colorado's Sheryl Estes, who took Wayland Baptist to the NAIA Championships six times, Cliffa Foster, who produced NAIA and NCAA Division II tournament teams at Mary-Hardin Baylor (Texas), and Jan Lowrey, who won over 400 games in 20 years at Tarleton State (Texas) - and veteran Division I coaches like Richmond's Lisa Boyer, who coached 10 years at Bradley, Seattle's Jacquie Hullah, who won five Ivy League titles at Dartmouth and also coached at Arizona State, and Columbus coach and GM Brian Agler, who built successful programs at three different schools. ABL general managers include outstanding sales, marketing, and business executives and former basketball coaches who have the experience, creativity, and dedication to successfully manage and promote their teams.

ABL Founding Player
Teresa Edwards

League Organization

The league was organized as a single entity that owns all the teams and pays the players' salaries. The ABL's founders - Gary Cavalli, Anne Cribbs, Steve Hams, and Bobby Johnson - have extensive sports, management, marketing and business experience. They were drawn together by a common interest in women's basketball and a desire to create a first-class pro league in the USA that brings America's best players home.

It's A Whole New Ballgame!

American Basketball League Co-Founders

Steve Hams

Steve Hams is co-founder and Chief Operating Officer of the American Basketball League. He launched the effort to establish the world' premier women's professional league in late 1994. It resulted from this lifelong enthusiasm for sports, his involvement with his oldest daughter's developing basketball career, and his business leadership experience.

Prior to founding the ABL, Hams had 14 years of increasingly responsible management and executive experience with high technology companies in Northern California's Silicon Valley, including Hewlett-Packard Corporation (1980-92) and General Magic (1992-95). His principal areas of expertise included staffing, compensation, executive leadership, employee education, and team and organizational design and development.

Hams received his Masters of Business Administration from the University of Michigan in 1980, graduating magna cum laude. Prior to business school, he spent six years as a teacher and assistant administrator for the Albany Unified School District in Albany, Calif.

Active in community affairs, Hams served from 1989-92 as the first Chairman of the Board for the Friends of the Mountain View Center for the Performing Arts. This non-profit corporation raised funds and developed community support for the CPA during its construction and early operational stages.

Born in Grand Rapids, Michigan, Hams lives with his wife, Denise, and their three daughters, Lauren, Brett and Taylor.

Gary Cavalli

Gary Cavalli is co-founder of the ABL and president of Cavalli & Cribbs. A former Associate Athletic Director at Stanford University, Cavalli has over 20 years of experience in sports related public relations, marketing, TV production, administration and event management.

As the ABL's Vice President for Marketing and Communications, Cavalli serves as the league's primary spokesperson and oversees public relations, marketing, broadcasting, and licensing. He is the ABL's liaison with the league's founding sponsor, Reebok, and served as interim Chief Financial Officer for two months prior to the season.

Cavalli has successfully promoted a number of national and international sports events, including the East-West Shrine Football Game, World Cup '94 Soccer matches, San Jose Sumo Basho, and several NCAA Championchip events. Since founding Cavalli & Cribbs in 1983, he has also created successful advertising and PR campaigns for leading retail, financial, medical and nonprofit accounts.

From 1974-82, Cavalli was Associate Athletic Director and Sports Information Director at Stanford, where he publicized and promoted 25 varsity sports, won 18 national publication awards, negotiated broadcast rights and corporate sponsorships, and managed the NCAA Soccer and Golf Championships and the Martin Luther King Games. In 1982, he authored the critically acclaimed book, Stanford Sports.

Active in community affairs, Cavalli is a former President of the Palo Alto Chamber of Commerce and won the coveted Tall Tree Award as the Palo Alto community's Outstanding Professional in 1992.

Born in Teaneck, N. J., he lives in Los Altos, Calif., with his wife, Christy, and their daughters, Erin, Kelly, and Alyssa.

Anne Cribbs

Anne Cribbs, co-founder of the ABL and vice president of Cavalli & Cribbs, has been involved in public relations, special events, and athletics since making her first splash as a world-class swimmer in the late 1950's.

As the league's Vice President for Sponsorships and Community Development, Cribbs oversees sponsor recruitment, fulfillment, and relations, as well as the ABL Founders Club, a nationwide support group.

Since joining Cavalliu & Cribbs in 1991, she has been responsible for managing and generating sponsorships for a number of major national and international events, including World Cup '94, the East-West Shrine Football Game, the San Jose Sumo Basho, the Stanford University Centennial Celebration, and the Olympians' "Welcoming Home Dinner."

In the 1990's, Cavalli & Cribbs has grown to become one of the most successful advertising, public relations, and event management firms in Northern California.

Cribbs is also President of the San Jose Sports Authority and treasurer of the U.S. Olympic Alumni Association. She was a member of the USA's 1959 Pan American Games and 1960 Olympic Games swimming teams, winning a gold medal in the 400-medley relay in Rome. She graduated from Stanford in 1979 with a B.A. in Political Science and later coached competitive swimming.

Born in Burlingame, Calif., she and her husband, Ian, have nine children. They live in Palo Alto with their daughter, Alex.

Bobby Johnson

Bobby Johnson is co-founder of the ABL and a prominent Atlanta businessman. One of the most respected accounting specialists and long-term health care operators in the state of Georgia, Johnson has 15 years of experience in ownership, auditing and consulting in the long-term health care field.

A 1975 graduate of the University of Louisville, he obtained a Masters of Accounting Science degree from the University of Illinois in 1976, finishing at the top of his class at both institutions.

Active in city and statewide governmental health affairs, he is a past Chairman of the Nursing Home Advisory Committee of the Georgia Department of Medical Assistance and Past Chairman of the Committee on Accounting the Internal Controls for the City of Atlanta.

Johnson lives in the Atlanta area with his wife and three children. He is the primary sponsor of the Atlanta Lady Tigers, the Georgia State AAU basketball champions in 1994 and '95.

Carolyn Jones and Don Stokes

ABL co-founders Carolyn Jones and Don Stkes were instrumental in initiating plans for the league in 1993. The Los Angeles-area residents conducted preliminary research and prepared the original concept document for the ABL.

Jones, a veteran educator and high school administrator with over 20 years of coaching experience, is the architect of the league's Athletes 4 Education community relations program. A4E will develop opportunities for ABL players, coaches, and league personnel to contribute to youth educational programs in areas where teams are located. Stokes, a principal in a small business consulting firm, was formerly a bank vice president and trust officer. He will serve as a development director for A4E.

Season Outlook

The Colorado Xplosion, coached by Sheryl Estes, possess a quick, athletic team with the ability to get up and down the floor. Point guards Shelley Sheetz, who revolutionized the game of women's basketball in the state of Colorado, and diminutive former Australian star Debbie Black will run the offense. At the off-guard is Edna Campbell, a leader with great shooting range and athleticism. USA Olympic Team alternate Sylvia Crawley will handle the post. The league's tallest player, Kashka Dydek, is versatile inside and outside, and will block her share of shots. Talent at the forward position is abundant, led by Crawley's former North Carolina teammate Charlotte Smith, and former Tennessee star Vonda Ward.

Season Outlook

The Columbus Quest, coached by Brian Agler, will emphasize fundamental team defense and a running offense. Local favorite Katie Smith from Ohio State will be relied upon to provide scoring punch from the wing, while Olympian Nikki McCray, a defensive specialist, should play the off-guard spot. Tonya Edwards, the 1987 NCAA Final Four's most outstanding player, takes the point offensively. Andrea Lloyd brings tremendous versatility to the power forward position.

Season Outlook

The New England Blizzard, coached by Cliffa Foster, looks to have one of the most talented front lines in the league. Iowa Kodak All-American Shanda Berry, a Maryland police officer, is an extremely skilled power forward, while Clarissa Davis, a small forward, has the ability to play every position on the court (like she did at Texas). Dana Johnson, a 6-foot-2 enforcer, will most likely start at center. At the off-guard, 1992 Olympian Carolyn Jones brings a deadly outside jumper and team leadership, complementing the unmatched intensity of 1996 Kodak All-American point guard Jennifer Rizzotti.

Season Outlook

The Portland Power, coached by Greg Bruce, is a baseline-to-baseline team, full of athletic players. A logjam of small forwards includes Olympian Katy Steding, former Oregon State star Tonja Kostic, and Tennessee All-Americans Tonya Sampson and Lisa Harrison. Former UCLA two-sport All-American Natalie Williams is a lock at the power forward spot with her tenacious rebounding instincts. The point guard position will be filled by either 1996 NCAA Final Four most outstanding player Michelle Marciniak or Coquese Washington.

Season Outlook

The Richmond Rage, coached by Lisa Boyer, will be ignited by Olympian point guard Dawn Staley. On the block, Marta will staff the post position, and will be surrounded by her former teammate in Brazil, Adrienne Goodson, Kodak All-American Kirsten Cummings, and versatile Taj McWilliams. Outside, lefty Dena Evans and speedy Molly Goodenbour will show their long-range savvy, while guard/forward Rehema Stephens from UCLA will match up with an opponent's bog guard. Olympic heptathlete Jackie Joyner-Kersee will be counted on for rebounding and as a defensive specialist.

Season Outlook

The San Jose Lasers, coached by Jan Lowery, look to be a controlled running team. Point guard Sonja Henning, an attorney-turned-ABL-player, will run the offense with her former Stanford teammate and Olympian Jennifer Azzi at the shooting guard. Henning and Azzi were teammates on Stanford's 1990 NCAA title team. Another Stanford player, Val Whiting, will most likely fill the power forward position, while Anita Kaplan and Kimberly Wood will play post. Small forward Sheri Sam, a 1996 Kodak All-American at Vanderbilt, has great promise.

Season Outlook

The Seattle Reign, coached by Jacquie Hullah, will tend to orbit around Venus...Olympian Venus Lacy, that is. With power and grace inside, she'll be the go-to player for a well-balanced Reign team. Cindy Brown, a 1988 Olympian, and the versatile Rhonda Smith will play a variety of positions. Seattle's potent outside shooting game is led by former Stanford star Christy Hedgepeth and former Kansas star Angela Aycock. Running the show will be Andrea Nagy, who possesses an uncanny knack of keeping the defense honest. Versatile forward/center Tari Phillips brings an inside and outside game as well as phenomenal rebounding ability.

Media Policies

Media Credentials

Credentials will be issued by the Atlanta Glory to accredited media including newspapers, magazines, radio and television stations or networks, and other news-gathering agencies. Season credentials will be provided to media members who cover the Glory on a regular basis throughout the season. Single-game credentials will be provided to reporters and photographers for individual games.

Members of the media wishing to obtain season or single-game photo or press passes must submit a written request on official company letterhead to the Jeff Johnson, Atlanta Glory Director of Public and Media Relations via mail or facsimile. Due to limited seating at the press table and the expected demand for credentials during the season, season passes are granted to selected individual members of the media and are non-transferable. Credentials must be displayed at all times.

Information about press table seating, media credential pickup and parking passes will be distributed by Jeff Johnson as it becomes available.

Photographers

Credentials are issued to those television and still photographers on assignment for accredited news-gathering organizations and those representatives of companies licensed by the American Basketball League. Priority in all designated photo areas will be granted to news organizations on nightly deadlines. All photographs taken are to be used for news-gathering purposes or officially-licensed products. Any commercial use of photographs taken other than official ABL licensees may constitute a violation of existing trademark and copyright restrictions.

Live Transmissions

Television stations may transmit live reports from ABL arenas prior to and after each game. Please notify Jeff Johnson, Atlanta Glory Director of Public and Media Relations, no later than 11:00am on game day that your station will be conducting a live shot. While the Glory will work to provide a coach or team member for the live shot if requested, time constraints may preclude a player or coach from a live interview.

Locker Room Access
Each credential issued by the Glory lists specific locations in the arena(s) where media are permitted. Both the home and visitors locker rooms are closed to the media at all times.

Pre- and Post-Game Interviews
Players and coaches will be available for pre-game interviews up to 60 minutes before game time. Players and coaches will conduct post-game interviews in the designated interview area 10 minutes after the game ends. The visiting and home coaches, respectively, will automatically be brought to the interview room at the end of the game. In addition, the Atlanta Glory media relations department at each site will bring out those visiting and home players (with their coach) requested by the media.

Game Notes and Statistics
Statistics and media information are available in the media work room two hours before each game. Statistics are distributed to the working media during and after the game.

Fax Service
The Atlanta Glory will provide complimentary fax service to members of the working media following each game.

Internet
Members of the media and basketball fans from around the globe can visit the official ABL website on the Internet's World Wide Web. The site provides the latest news, statistics, features, and notes from each team and around the league. The ABL's address is http://ableague.com/.
